

Question 1 - How can food bridge the gap between cultures?
Write here your answers, please!

QUESTION 2 - What do you eat for Christmas? Add a typical Christmas food of your country and its name.

Bolo rei is a very typical cake in Portugal! Have you tried it?

Food is a thing that transcends human life, there is history and stories, so by sharing different types of food from different cultures a bridge can be made between different cultures.
Pedro

Food is a thing that transcends human life, there is history and stories, so by sharing different types of food from different cultures a bridge can be made between different cultures.
Pedro

Since every culture has their own culture and things every one is different but food can be the same in different culture connecting people together.

Eduardo

1- Food cultures are intertwined due to past migrations. Because of that food is a bridge between cultures.
2- We don't celebrate Christmas but we come together for a big dinner with our family on New Year's Eve.

Everyone likes food, so everyone is willing to try other foods and food is a

I eat tortellini and...

Food and culture

Like One person likes this. Be the first to like this.

Post

Highlight New

THE CHRISTMAS FOOD!

Hi guys!

For Christmas, my family and I typically eat, with together all my relatives, Lasagne, peppers, meat vegetables and finally some fruit. As for the sweet we also eat the "panettone" with ice inside it.

Veronica Lenzi...Italy

Hi there! In my opinion, the only way food can bring the different cultures together, is to simply share it!

Fernanda

I firmly believe that cuisine possesses the extraordinary ability to mend cultural divides. The exquisite flavors and culinary traditions healing from division

I eat tortellini and...

For Christmas I usually eat "Cotechino with..."

Cotechino is a type of meat made of pork meat.

It is usually served...

And for dessert I eat always...